Dear FCC,

I am writing this letter in regard to the Indiana DoNotCall List. I value this list's ability to maintain my privacy and my sanity. As a person with ADD, I need silence and no interruptions in my housework. I have been a member of the list for over a year and do not receive the amount of phone calls I had previously. However some companies, such as Capital Bank do violate this and call me. Today at 3:45p.m. I received a call from Cardholder Services a branch of Capital Banks, which is a company offering credit cards that I have never done business with wanting me to move all my cards to their bank. I find this offensive and troublesome since I was recently unemployed due to my company going overseas. I have diligently tried to keep a good credit rating and now you want to remove the DoNotCall list! Since that is the case, I hope the government will be able to send me welfare to pay all the credit cards from the unscrupulous banks. First they offer a low 6% and then they will up the rate to 26% after 6 months.

Sincerely,

Linda Kay Leslie
